

Introduction to PPC

Tasks

1. Create a table comparing Pay Per Click (PPC) advertising with organic search results, using examples from Google Search results for 'best headphones'. List at least 3 differences.
2. Search for 'online food delivery' on Google and identify which results are paid ads (PPC) and which are organic listings. Take a screenshot and highlight the PPC ads.
3. Write a short scenario explaining how a Flipkart seller could use PPC ads to increase sales of a new smartphone model. Mention the keywords they might target and the expected outcome.
4. List 3 advantages and 2 disadvantages of using PPC advertising for a new Zomato-style food delivery app launch.
5. Use ChatGPT to generate a list of 5 catchy Google Ads headlines for promoting a new IPL cricket fantasy league app. Paste the AI's suggestions and pick your favorite.

1. PPC Advertising vs Organic Search Results

Google explains that paid/non-organic results are advertisements, while organic results are free listings that appear based on relevance. Paid search ads can appear above organic results and are marked as “Sponsored”/“Ad.”

Point	PPC Advertising	Organic Search Results
Cost	Advertiser pays when someone clicks the ad.	No payment is made for each click.
Position	Usually appears at the top of the Google results page with a “Sponsored” label.	Appears below paid ads based on Google's ranking systems.
Speed	Can generate visibility quickly after the campaign starts.	Usually takes time to build rankings through SEO.
Control	Advertiser can select keywords, budget, audience and ad message.	Less direct control over ranking position.
Example – “best headphones”	A headphone retailer may show a sponsored ad for “best headphones.”	Review sites, retailers or brands may appear naturally for the same search.

Conclusion: PPC provides paid visibility quickly, while organic search focuses on earning visibility through SEO and relevance.

2. Google Search: “online food delivery”

Google search results for "online food delivery".

3. Flipkart Seller PPC Scenario

Scenario

A seller on Flipkart launches a new smartphone priced at ₹14,999. Since the phone is new, it does not yet have strong organic visibility or many customer reviews.

The seller can use PPC advertising to make the smartphone visible to people who are actively searching for similar products.

Keywords they might target

- best smartphone under ₹15,000
- smartphone under 15000
- new smartphone 2026
- budget smartphone
- 5G smartphone under ₹15,000
- best 5G phone
- affordable 5G smartphone

The seller could create an attractive ad highlighting:

“New 5G Smartphone Under ₹15,000 – Shop Now”

Expected outcome

The PPC campaign can generate impressions, clicks and product-page visits from users searching for smartphones. If the product page, price, reviews and offer are attractive, some of those visitors can convert into sales.

4. PPC for a New Zomato-Style Food Delivery App

3 Advantages

1. Fast visibility

PPC can put the new food-delivery app in front of potential customers quickly.

2. Targeted audience

The company can target keywords such as:

- food delivery near me
- order food online
- food delivery app
- online food delivery
- restaurant delivery

3. Measurable results

The company can track clicks, conversions, cost per acquisition and other campaign metrics, making it easier to evaluate advertising performance.

2 Disadvantages

1. Cost can increase quickly

Competitive keywords can require significant advertising spending.

2. Traffic can stop when advertising stops

Unlike organic SEO traffic, PPC visibility depends on continuing the advertising campaign and budget.
